The Carmel Pine Cone

48th Year, No. 49 — THURSDAY, 6 DECEMBER, 1962 — Copy 15c

Editor's Window

A recent advertisement in the Pine Cone said that gala holiday dresses could be long or short, depending on the wearer's whim.

Pleased to know that in this increasingly conforming and invariable world it is still possible, in little out-of-the-way places like Carmel, to exercise a certain amount of discretion in some of our personal preferences, I turned back to more serious business.

But, for some reason, the ad haunted me, plucking appealingly but unintelligibly at my subconscious. Suddenly, I realized that I was being distracted by a subliminal uncertainty as to exactly what the wearer's whim might be.

It arrested my other pursuits altogether, and abruptly the grave demands of editorial policy, what to do about Cuba, and how to make ends meet seemed anything but consequential.

For heaven's sake, I thought, staring worriedly out the window, what is a whim?

Suddenly, I realized with deepening appreciation, the travail and anguish which confronts the couturier, who must not only accommodate the breadth, girth and height of assorted and capricious females, but something called their whim, as well.

No amount of sombre or frivolous reflection which at times wandered down some pretty esoteric and astounding avenues uncovered the anatomy or use of the whim.

And even now, sitting here in a deepening gloom of frustration, I am without an explanation of its shape, size or use.

Can you help me?

Or have you lost your sense of whim?

"What's all this about dogs? I always thought that Carmel was strictly for the birds."

Hark, Hark The Dogs Do Bark!

Dogs, cows and burros got embroiled last night in a public hearing before the city council on an ordinance which would permit veterinarians and dog grooming parlors to operate under rigid use permits in the C-2 zone of the city.

Standing in lonely resentment was J. O. Handley, owner of a considerable amount of land in the district, who worried about the possible proximity of such enterprises to city-owned land, the Carmel Youth Center and some mighty fine homes nearby. "I wouldn't want a bunch of dogs yelling there at night," he protested to the council.

Marian Thomas arose later on to reply that, "It isn't the sick ones that holler."

And George Leland of the Carmel Pet Shop reminded the council that it might be better for every neighborhood in town if sick and howling dogs were confined in the soundproof and odorless quarters of a veterinarian, than in far-from-soundproof homes.

The point was made with good intention, but was redundant. Except for emergency overnight confinement, the ordinance does not permit dogs—unlike people—to assume the status of transient, tourist or summer visitor in residence in the zone, thus avoiding not only much of the boarding problems, but also the far knottier one of the motel tax.

Suddenly Handley began worrying aloud about the possibility of cows mooing their way onto the scene.

At this point, all the light-headedness seemed to affect the council, from which emerged a query about just how, by the way, a veterinarian might handle Carmel's burro population (2)?

"I would," solemnly responded Dr. V. J. Marasco, "treat them as out-patients."

Vaudeville, it seemed, was far from dead, and the animal act could still wow the audience and leave 'em rollin' in the aisles.

Marjorie Fontana, arising to the challenge with all of the vehemence of an officer of the SPCA, stoutly supported veterinarians as an asset to the community. At the same time, she avoided any implication of animosity toward Handley for his stand by remarking that he was very kind to animals, and had recently donated materials to the SPCA for dog beds.

Others joined Miss Fontana in urging adoption of the ordinance, which was initiated primarily at the instance of Dr. Marasco, who plans to build a clinic, but not the boarding facilities or kennels which apparently so hugely irked Handley.

Having heard a parade of witnesses who loyally and enthusiastically endorsed both Dr. Morasco and his project, Mayor Eben Whittlesey closed the hearing after saying, "In the interests of time, I am glad that Dr. Marasco's patients couldn't appear."

The mayor's guide dog, Regan, lying at his feet, loosed a pained and extended groan.

Intoxicating Drama At The Studio Theatre

"What does the term 'legitimate theatre' mean? It might even mean a cabaret or burlesque. Who knows?"

So mused Michael Franke, local accountant and one-time political aspirant, yesterday afternoon when he announced that he had finally decided to appeal last week's granting by the board of adjustments of a use permit amendment for the Studio Theater.

Since last Thursday, Franke, who is represented by attorney Elwood Wilson, and who handles accounts for a number of businesses in town, including at least one bar and restaurant, has supposedly been pondering whether to appeal or not.

Although unheard from at the regularly noticed public hearing before the board in October, Franke, through Wilson, abruptly attempted to protest to the board last week as it commenced deliberations on the granting of the permit. But chairman Fred Kneeble forstalled the protest as being untimely, and Franke's only remaining maneuver was, therefore, to the city council. Over the weekend he told Dwight Doerr, manager of the Studio, that he might reconsider. By yesterday, however, he had changed his tune, though protesting that he did so reluctantly.

"I feel badly that we have to move against such a nice group," he said. But they have unwittingly put their foot in the door in the wrong direction."

Franke said he was afraid of the precedent of combining a theatre with the service of food, beer and wine, claiming that it might lead to the evolvement of "a real night club," and this would not be "in concert" with the better interests of Carmel.

He objects, he added, that the provision of the use permit amendment which requires a pause of at least four hours between the last service of food and beverage and the commencement of entertainment would not do much good. "They could commence serving, then break, present a half hour of entertainment, and return to serving immediately thereafter for the rest of the night."

Asked if he was representing other interests, Franke responded that he was not, although he admitted, somewhat obscurely, that he had been approached by "certain people" to circulate a petition.

Curiously enough, nobody can be quite certain what the immediate result of the appeal will be Though its filing suspends issuance of the permit until the council can adjudicate the matter, it is merely an amendment to a basic permit for a theater, issued last August, which is apparently undisturbed by this action, and probably unreachable by the appellants or anyone else. The Studio, beer and wine license in hand, has been serving during the past week, and could not be enjoined from continuing this activity, which is a use permitted by the zoning laws of the city to begin with.

Does the action, therefore, have the ironic result of darkening the theater? Franke claims this is not his purpose. It does, for sure, suspend the regulations which the city council had approved, at the request of the board, to make sure that the two activities—the serving of food and beverages, and the presentation of legitimate theater—would be seperated reasonably enough not to breach the provision of the municipal code that entertainment cannot be presented "on the same premises" where alcoholic beverages were served. City Attorney John Morse had advised the council that, in his opinion, as long as the two functions did not occur simultaneously, no offense was committed. On this basis, the council had indicated to the board that it would approve the conditions if embodied in the amendment.

Doerr refused comment when asked what he would do when the appeal was filed. It is apparent that he can continue to serve meals and beverages. Or he could present the show which is scheduled to open a week from Saturday. But how close in point of time he may bring the two operations together without, on the one hand jeopardizing the theatre, because

GOVERNMENT

Something's Afoot

Last night Dr. James E. Gilman threw the U. S. Constitution, a raft of legal citations, and charges of discrimination at the city council, claiming that a proposed amendment to the municipal code which would prohibit doctors, lawyers, architects and other professionals from operating out of their homes was demonstrably illegal because it denied a man the right to earn a livelihood, and discriminated between classes.

Gilman's point was that artists, writers, musicians and teachers, who would be untouched by the amendment, were just as much professionals as were his own particular species, and he machine-gunned an admiring council with a barrage of New York and Georgia cases to prove it.

His counteroffense succeeded, at least, in delaying matters, to permit city attorney John Morse to study the citations which Dr. Gilman, who is a pediatrist (foot specialist), had presented.

The dramatic force of Gilman's protest was evidenced by a glorious freudian stumble of Morse, who advised the council that "it might do whatever it saw foot," but that further study seemed to be in order.

Night's Work

Last night the city council disposed of a long-dormant business association proposal to double the business license tax to finance off-street parking, by adopting a report which found that the new motel tax was going to provide plenty of money.

It also passed at first reading an ordinance making the collection of garbage compulsory; named the entire park complex containing the shuffleboard and tennis courts, at 1st and Mission streets, Forest Hill Park; put over to the 1963-64 budget a compromise improvement project for Junipero Avenue between Seventh and Eighth which would leave intact the landscaping in the median island; gave another year's life to the Forestry Commission, otherwise due to expire at the end of the month; confirmed the reappointment by Mayor Eben Whittlesey of George Walker to the garbage and refuse disposal district board, Mrs. Horace Dormody and Frederick Duhring to the library board, and Hazel McClellan to the arts commission; then went home at 1:00 a.m.

Hot Air

Hot air, mechanical and human, engrossed the city council last Tuesday as it gathered at Junipero and Second Avenue to consider the complaints of irritated citizens that the noise of ventilating fans on the P. G. & E. substation were so annoying at night as to cause the loss of tenants in surrounding rented homes and the flight of nighttime peace and repose in the neighborhood. Company officials, giving assurance that recently - installed automatic equipment would reduce the duration and frequency of ventilating, also indicated they might try to baffle the windy noises by adding insulation to the ventilators. The council asked them to hurry up about it.

Kids and Books

Last Monday the Board of Education sat down with the Harrison Memorial Library Board and heard the plea of the library's chairman, Donald Craig, for help. Students from the high school, flocking at night to the library, are finding insufficient space and not enough reference material, and the library, while feeling obliged to provide as much of each as is necessary, are finding it impossible to discover the means. The mood of the education board was sympathetic and interested, though they proposed no answer of their own.

School libraries, it has been found, are brightly lit, when opened at night for students, but lightly used. The students, it seems, have enough of school during the day, and would rather have a different environment at night.

In addition, there is no study period in the high school curricula, and consequently, the students have no opportunity during this time to use school facilities for some of their research and reference.

The two facts combine to make the school library something of an anachronism, and the load of the Harrison Library an excessive one.

The library board is still musing about a student study center, a separate young people's library, to relieve space problems, noise aggravations and shelf loads. Nothing apparently came out of the meeting, however, to indicate that the school board might lend more than sympathy and interest to this or any other solution.

WHITE OAKS

Dance Forms

The final winter concert at the White Oaks Theatre will be a presentation of dance forms called The Theatre Of Dance. It will take place this Saturday, 8 December, at 8:30 p.m. Tickets will be on sale at the box office. Admission—$1.50 and $2.00.

Gale Peterson, a well known director and choreographer of this area, has done entirely new works to the music of such contemporaries as Bela Bartok, Ralph Vaughn-Williams, Igor Stravinsky, and Douglas Moore. The program will be one of the few full length concerts of dance to be presented on the Peninsula. It will be rich in classical background as well as modern divertisement and abstractions of dance.

Peterson has been with the White Oaks Theatre as managing director-choreographer since 1959. His background in theatre and the dance is extensive. When at San Francisco State College he organized his own dance company, also working with the Interplayers. He has to his credit many major productions, musicals, and 15 original ballets and dance dramas. He is currently instructing classes in jazz and contemporary dance.

Appearing with Gale Peterson will be Miss Maria Anderson, an actress-dancer from the motion picture industry. She has been with numerous ballet companies, and has worked with such stylists as Bronasliva Nijinska, Carmelita Maracchi, and Eugene Loring. Before coming to White Oaks Theatre, Miss Anderson was associated with Theatre Vanguard in Los Angeles.

AUDUBON

Island Treasure

Island Treasure, personally narrated by Walter Breckenridge, will be presented Friday, 7 December, at 8 p.m. in Sunset Auditorium, Carmel, by the Monterey Peninsula Audubon Society and the Carmel Adult School.

Extensive study of the wild life of a single island high in the Mississippi River has resulted in the fascinating lecture which Dr. Breckenridge has prepared. He is widely known for his contributions in the fields of ornithology and herpetology. For many years he has followed the seasons and lived with the wildlife on this Mississippi Island. He is well known for his reconstruction of wildlife habitat which are displayed in museums, and for his bird paintings and etchings which have appeared in numerous ornithological works.

CINEMA

Moving Day

Cinema 6, the Monterey Peninsula's only film society, is moving. In order to provide better viewing conditions — more space, wider screen, more efficient projection — Cinema 6 will move to the Monterey Youth Center at El Estero and Pearl beginning 9 December. The Golden Coach starring Anna Magnani will be shown on this date and memberships for the next series will also be on sale.

The new series at the Youth Center will begin on 30 December and will open with Federico Fellini's The White Sheik as the main feature with a short called Moon Bird. Subsequently the series will include: 13 January—The Maltese Falcon, with Humphrey Bogart, and the short subject Skip the Maloo; 27 January—Vampyr, and the short, Paladini; 10 February—The Tender Game and 4 Bags Full; 24 February—The Roots, and A Time Out Of War; 10 March — Rashoman, and Muscle Beach.

Cinema 6 filmings occur on the 2nd and 4th Sundays of each month at 8 p.m. Memberships for the entire series of six are $3.50. Half series are $2.00, while limited single admissions are 75c. Tickets are transferable, and may be purchased at Carmel Box Office, Sancho Panza Coffee House, New Monterey Neighborhood Center, or at the door of the Monterey Youth Center.

MPC DRAMA

Much Ado

Much Ado About Nothing, Shakespeare's second romantic comedy, will be presented by the Monterey Peninsula College drama department 10-15 December in the Little Theatre on campus.

The production will be staged substantially as it was staged in the Elizabethan theatre, according to MPC drama department chairman Morgan Stock. No curtains between scenes will provide a "smooth flow of action," and the audience will be brought closer to the action through the extension of the stage and the addition of side acting areas.

Lavish costumes have been rented from Occidental College, which presented Much Ado in its drama festival last summer. One of the MPC leads, Val Risely, who plays Beatrice in the local production, was also a member of the Occidental cast.

Other leading roles are carried by John Elber, as Benedick; Dave Loring, as Claudio; April Edwards, Hero; John Boles, Leonato; Fred Roberts, Don Pedro; Phil Rayher, Don John; John Copley, Antonio.

Morgan Stock is director; Paulette Solt, stage manager. Richard Frazer and his stagecraft class are handling set design and construction.

TOTAL BLACKOUT BRINGS SURPRISES

At 4:45 o'clock last night, Carmelites were startled into action when the fire siren shrieked its four blast warning for five short minutes. It was the village's first taste of total blackout.

The blackout, which capped the entire peninsula, was very successful. In Carmel, it was particularly so. Although in some cases the police were forced to use their sirens and red lights, the streets were cleared of traffic almost immediately. All inhabitants were ordered to take cover for the duration of the blackout, and block wardens told all residents to remain at home with their families.

Under cover of darkness, from somewhere came the orders that Carmel was to be evacuated. Certain precinct captains ordered members of their precincts to leave immediately for Monterey, and as a more unfortunate action in some areas, small boys ran down the streets shouting the word to clear out. At least 15 or 20 people were known to have left Carmel.

In the outlying districts, the Mission Ranch Club was one of the first to be evacuated. Several of the inhabitants were sent up Carmel Valley. While driving up the Valley road without lights, they were amazed to meet other cars with lights blazing, and within a short time everyone was sent home.

During all this, rumors flew thick and fast. There was one which said that only a thousand foot strip along the waterfront was to be evacuated. Another said that there were five Japanese battleships just off Santa Cruz, while still another claimed there was a major sea engagement going on 150 miles from San Francisco. Most fantastic were the claims of actual invasion, and bombers directly overhead.

Those who remained at home, were, for the most part greatly puzzled, when they discovered that there wasn't a California station (including KDON) that went off the air. Even the "touchy" Los Angeles stations were strong and clear.

In Santa Cruz, where wholesale evacuation was taking place, hundreds of men, women and children living in waterfront homes were sent, by the army, inland to the shelter of friends, churches, and schools. The all-out period, which started at 6:45 p.m., ended at 7:55 p.m., and everyone returned to their homes. The army described the situation as a "precautionary measure in case of an eventuality."

In Carmel, the "all clear" came at 8:45 p.m., and everything returned to normal. (A rash assumption, not borne out by the ensuing 21 years.)

Want to feel proud of California? Right now, before the skiiers take over the mountains, is the time to look out over Nature's best work. It will bring a very satisfied feeling to anyone who appreciates the West. It also makes you feel rather small when you see the vastness of the mountains and the valleys.

Somehow, driving along in a sports car with the top down seems to fit properly in one's perspective. A small car with hill climbing and handling ability and unlimited vision is just the perfect vehicle to enjoy the mountain roads.

Annually, the Pebble Beach Sports Car Club takes a long week end tour up thru the foothills for just such an enjoyable trip. Twenty-four cars recently completed two days and two nights of sightseeing, motoring, sleeping and cooking out, known as the Survival Tour.

Actually, the name misleads a bit, because it was back in 1957 when we all got snowed in one night on the other side of Tioga Pass and we had to trek back to Tahoe to get over the hills. The name stuck with the annual tour, but today we try to arrange the campsites where it is possible to avoid freezing to death. It still seems to suggest anti-freeze for both car and driver along about dusk. The sun sets early and so the evenings are very long and even after dinner and the campfire, singing and visits to the Lodge, everyone gets a lot of sleep and is fresh and eager next morning.

To get back to sports cars, I wonder if you remember how much fun it is to go on a leisurely trip with several carloads of people with similar interests? What a great treat it is to go thru all the 49er relics, towns like Angels Camp, Jackson, Volcano, and Murphy's. And when you show up this time of year with 24 carloads, the business people really put out the red carpet.

The Mercer Cave tour was entirely for our members. During the stop at —Coulterville, we had a good Indian guide who panned gold for us. There was a fleck or two of the yellow metal nearly every panfull and some of the club members had panned before. To think you can still find a bit of gold after all the sluicing and placer mining has been done, is exciting.

On Sunday we all went our own way in groups, some back to do more mining, some rock hunting or antique shopping, and some to look at more mining towns. Our group of six cars headed up Route 88, over Carson Pass to get another good look at the Sierra's majesty. We also love to drive the cars along the winding roads, up and down the hills and over to Woodford's to buy the Indian pine nuts. This year they are very large, but they don't taste quite like the smaller ones do. From Woodrord's, we went over to Markleeville, which has literally closed up for the year, and back over wonderful Ebbert's Pass, down by the frozen little lakes and through the big pines to Angels Camp.

Following Route 4 on down to Farmington is like the old, old road from Monterey to Carmel and wonderfully beautiful as it follows the land contours on into Modesto.

The little cars all made the trip with no troubles. They all got a bit of a workout and still delivered us from 25 to 20 miles per gallon; but best of all, they gave us 600 miles of scenic grandeur unequalled by any other.

We were all glad that we had gone this late in the year because we had the places to ourselves. Once, up by Mosquito Lake, I was looking off at the quiet distnat forest when I remembered the way Carmel used to be when you walked down to Slevin's Post Office, and the only squirrels you met were outside the store on the pine trees.

Things have changed, but you can still find a great deal of the state most of us picture as California if you'll take a little ried up to the Sierra . . . And try it in a sports car, top down.

Conservation

Associate Justice William O. Douglas has resigned from the board of directors of the Sierra Club, conservationist group. A possible conflict of interest, arising from a pending suit by conservation groups against Secretary of the Interior Udall, prompted the relcutant move.

Big Game Laws

The Senate Fact Finding Committee on Natural Resources, of which State Senator Fred S. Farr (D., Carmel) is a member, will hold a public hearing on 11 December, in Sacramento, to consider the policies and procedures of the Department of Fish and Game regarding big game depredation control. Farr turns a critical eye on varying individual concepts of game management, and expects the committee to conduct a thorough review of current policies, to determine their current appropriateness.

BELONGING TO THE HEART

By Carol Baker

The obsolete meaning for "cordiality" is anything belonging to the heart. It is regretful that so lovely a meaning should become obsolete, and it might be a good idea to submit the word to Dr. Evans—for surely "cordiality" should regain its old meaning.

Belonging to the heart brings to mind many things—the most cordial of moods, the warmest of occasions;—when we have received a "cordial welcome" anywhere we know that the welcome has come from the heart, and when we read "Cordially Yours" on the signature of a letter we know that the writer has struck a chord of warmth within us.

Cordiality is especially a tradition on holidays when friendship is mingled with feasting and festivity. The warm cheery fire and the good food made us all feel cordial toward each other. And it is especially at these times that we bring out Christian Brothers wines — because Christian Brothers wines are an American tradition where good folks gather, setting the mood for a cheering and invigorating interlude — a warm regard for our friends—a mood belonging to the heart. Christian Brothers wines include: Red and White table wines, Appetizer Wines, Dessert Wines, and Brandy — all of them complements to the mood of your choice, all of them promoters of good appetite and well being.

FROM A LIBRARIAN'S NOTEBOOK

By Ruth Galvin Thornburg

Books for Christmas giving! Here are a few that might please some particular person on your gift list, and for your convenience we list prices.

For a friend interested in world affairs or politics there is a book by Richard B. Morris who is a professor at Columbia University. The title is Great Presidential Decisions: State Papers That Changed the Course of History. There are 34 momentous decisions included here, beginning with that of Washington when he decided to put down the Whiskey Rebellion, and ending with Eisenhower's decision to propose his "open skies" program at the Geneva Conference in 1955. These are decisions that called for vigorous action which shaped American history and that of the whole world. The price of the book is $7.50.

The Thomas Wolfe Reader is a comprehensive collection of pieces from his novels and several short stories. Most of the excerpts are from Look Homeward, Angel and from Of Time And The River. This book would be excellent as a gift for the reader who loves the writing of Wolfe and could use some of his best writing in easily available form. This one is also $7.50.

For your friend with a basement or studio workshop, there is Fun With a Saw by Cristoforo. The saw involved here is the radial arm saw which looks in the photographs to be a very business-like instrument, capable of doing many various tasks. Not for children or careless adults. The book is full of illustrations showing saws in many types of action. This one is $5.95.

A book that might enthrall many a reader is Monsters of the Deep by Thomas Helm. Now this is a fascinating book! The author begins at the beginning, with the monsters which roamed the forests in the pre-historic era and goes on from this to the present day and to an explanation of the fact that monsters are possible. There are excellent drawings by Alexander Key, and many photographs, including one of the Loch Ness monster of Scotland, perhaps the world's favorite monster. A book like this might make a delightful gift for a teen age boy with a lively curiosity. The price is $4.00, which is reasonable for a book these days.

Next we have two books which you might give to a friend you wish to impress with either your erudition or your wealth. One is the new Richmond Lattimore translation of The Iliad of Homer. It is a large, handsome book published by the University of Chicago Press for $13.50, and strikingly illustrated by Leonard Baskin. It has been said that this translation may be the definitive translation for many years to come.

The second book might make a good companion volume for the Lattimore Iliad because it is entitled The Earth, The Temple, and The Gods with the subtitle Greek Sacred Architecture. It was written by Vincent Scully, and published by the Yale University Press for a price of $15.00 a copy. Almost half of the book is composed of photographs which show not only the sites of the temples but also their floor plans, ornaments, and present day condition. This is a beautiful, comprehensive book.

And for a stocking present, or in place of a greeting card, how about This Is San Francisco by Sazek. Charming illustrations and a nostalgic attitude toward the city which will endear the book to everyone who comes in contact with it. Costs about $2.50.

Happy book shopping!

READING

Villa Montalvo

Villa Montalvo, cultural center near Saratoga, announces a special Christmas reading program on Sunday, 9 December, at 2 p.m. by Noreen LaBarge Mitchell, professor in the speech and drama department at San Jose State College. There will be no admission charge.

Mrs. Mitchell's theme will deal with customs of Christmas—things borrowed from the Druid celebration to the Biblical stories of St. Luke and St. Matthew, covering many eras in many lands.

A distinguished writer, director and performer in professional theatre on stage, radio and television, Mrs. Mitchell has been a teacher of oral interpretation at SJS since 1951, and is one of three directors of Staged Readings and Readers' Theatre Presentations at the college.

Mrs. Mitchell has appeared in many reading preformances from San Francisco to Monterey and throughout the midwest. After receiving her A.B. and M.A. degrees at the University of Michigan, she did graduate work in oral interpretation and allied fields, followed by experience as a professional actress in Grand Rapids, Ann Arbor and Manistee.

At SJS she has adapted and directed many staged reading presentations, including most recently, Irving Stone's novel Love Is Eternal, and next spring she will present a performance of Stephen Vincent Benet's epic poem, John Brown's Body.

POETRY

"Voices"

George Hitchcock, the next VOICES poet to appear in Monterey and Big Sur, is a man of many talents. In addition to being a widely published poet, he is a distinguished theatrical producer and actor. He is also one of the editors of the San Francisco Review — New Directions Annual, a publication which has consistently brought major talent before the public.

"Voices: 1962-63 is designed to bring the very best contemporary poets to the Monterey Peninsula," Richard Barker, producer of the series, stated. "We look forward to presenting Mr. Hitchcock here. He is a brilliant reader and his poetry is strong, direct and fearlessly honest.

"We firmly believe that a large and enthusiastic audience for modern poetry exists on the Monterey Peninsula. You know, over two hundred people attended the Robinson Jeffers Memorial Reading in Carmel last February."

George Hitchcock will read his poetry at Ring's, 565 Abrego Street, on Sunday afternoon, 9 December, at 2:30, following his Saturday night appearance at the Big Sur Hot Springs. Tickets will be available in book stores on the Monterey Peninsula.

The next Voices program will be a gala Christmas performance of Joyce's Portarit of the Artist as a Young Man, adapted for concert reading by Sheila Goldes.

ROAD TEST

By LARRY ROSE

The MG 1100 Sedan Is Examined

It is disconcerting, having test driven an automobile, to find that I am going to have to resort almost exclusively to superlatives. For it is the fond refuge of people who speak about cars to salt their discussion pretty heavily with reservations and criticism.

Frequently this can be justified, for most automobiles are a disconcerting mixture of good and bad, with an appreciable amount of the indifferent thrown in for uncertain variety.

The MG 1100 sedan, on the market for only a few weeks, is an uncommon contradiction in this respect, and in many others. There is nothing apparently bad about this car, much that is superb, and while filled with variety, there is nothing uncertain about it at all. It is, in fact, a very positive, assured and unusual automobile. I like it all the way from here to there and back again. I like it absolutely, unequivocally and to an extent and degree that brooks no quibbling.

I spent a week end test driving a demonstrator sedan provided by Bob Baird, sales manager of British Motors of Monterey. The car was not particularly prepared for critical examination and had not enjoyed any of the nervous pampering which frequently preceeds the testing of a car for a news or magazine report. Consequently, it had a few trivial faults of condition which I am not even going to mention because they are unrelated to its performance and would not exist in a car sold to you.

My testing also avoids the rather clinical and austere approach for which car magazines are noted. A performance chart or a list of Tapley readings is small help in parking a car, and the usual driver (who is the one who usually buys a car) wants only to know what a car does, not how or why.

If you are such a person, I can tell you that this car does everything, and well. There are some stunning and quite sound mechanical and engineering reasons for this performance, for the car is not simply one of the "improved" models which greet each new season in a sweat of slogans and ecstatic broadsides: "This year, drive a car with ROUND wheels! Only the Flarb has them!" or "Cranlic Engineers Have Found The Answer To The Baffling Problem of Stopping! Don't Drag Your Feet! Be The First on Your Street to Use Brakes! Stop Going! Drive a Cranlic!"

Some quite loud and ecstatic things are being said about the MG 1100 sedan, but there is ample season for their being heard. And believed.

The car has two extraordinary characteristics, one obvious and stunning—the ride.

There are no coil or leaf springs in the car's suspension, nor are there shock absorbers. Succinctly, the car is sprung with rubber bags filled with a water-based, anti-freeze damping fluid, sealed in the containers for life. The system is interconnecting. These two features combine to provide a "ride" that is incamparable. It is glisteningly smooth; there is no pitch; there is no roll. There is no oscillation, a curse of the short-wheel-base car. The MG corners furiously, and I would guess that it comfortably rounds any and all corners at least 20 miles per hour faster than is possible in almost anything on wheels. By this, I mean that four people can sit quite at ease during the process without being flung across the seats or sliding out the window.

This cornering is due as much to the front position of the engine, transmission and differential in one transversely-mounted package as it is due to the fluid suspension, low center of gravity and the compensation of the inter-connecting suspension system, which also plays a big role in conquering pitch.

I made several panic stops in the car. No matter how abruptly the fine disc brakes are applied, the car is reluctant to lose road adhesion. And it stops squarely, without weaving or switching. At 55 miles per hour, I brought it to a stop in 45 feet—and the three passengers were not pitched forward in their seats, the nose of the car did not dive at the ground, the wheels did not lock, and an even more abrupt stop would have been possible.

The steering, featuring the incomparable rack and pinion design, is quite perfect. It is, as a matter of fact, the other extraordinary feature of which I spoke. The wheel lays out where it can easily and firmly be grasped, and it is certain that even a midget would not have to look under or through the rim or spokes. A little over three turns, lock to lock, distinguishes its geometry. It is utterly without road vibration or slack. In turning, whether standing or moving, it swings easily, positively and precisely, without hunting. It is literally thrilling to steer, producing a symmetrical enjoyment disconcertingly unrelated to such a mechanical function. Briefly, respecting its other attributes: it's 1100cc (actually 1098cc) engine produces excellent performance: O-60 in about 21 seconds. It cruises with assurance at 75 mph, and in trial topped Carmel Hill at 45 mph with a passenger load of 600 pounds. It parks with disarming ease, and visibility is unusual in all directions. Five people can ride in superb comfort in seats that are as perfectly contoured as anything I have experienced. The noise level is commendably low, and in the back seat almost non-existent, either as wind or body resonance.

Now, this is no fairy tale. The car does have faults, only two of which are material. And one of these, I am assured, disappears — the stiffness of reverse gear. The car I drove had a most stubborn gate into reverse. I kept wishing for a hammer to beat my way into gear. This may clear up with use, and it is to be hoped, for the gear box is crisp and deliberate, as good as anything MG ever made. And the MG box has been marvelous.

The other fault will not go away. The doors are quite hard to close, and this is a geometrical problem of a badly-positioned fulcrum. On examination, however, this may not be worth thinking much about, because once in the car, the desire to get out is not intense.

I have been waiting until the end, until after I have said what is so resoundingly good, to point out why it is particularly so. The MG sedan is a superb vehicle for Peninsula roads, particularly Carmel, where it would iron out, almost to oblivion, the ruts and roughness of our streets; where it would lick parking fatigue and slip into tight places; where it would provide crisp acceleration at the hills, instant and smooth braking at the blind intersections; where it would perform agreeably under the command of the most disinterested driver—or provide eager response to the most exacting.

The Art Of Meaningless Conversation
or
Avoiding the Pitfalls of Intelligibility

So much conversation nowadays is meaningless that it almost becomes meaningless to point out the meaninglessness of it by calling it meaningless. The answer lies, of course, in calling it something else.

This could become more meaningful than the conversation itself, which could remain meaningless without being tedious.

In such a happy state, people could continue to say nothing to one another as they are accustomed to doing, and could for a change concentrate on silently defining to themselves the nature of the nonsense being spoken. If it would do nothing else, the diligent practice of this exercise would make at least one party to the conversation listen, an eventuality which might create some social distress and a certain amount of parlor anguish while getting used to it.

But those willing to experiment might try the following categories, carefully and sensitively described for the discriminating ear in Roget's Thesaurus. Speak them aloud for clearer comprehension: NONSENSICAL TALK: twaddle, twattle, twiddle-twaddle, blather, babble, gabblement, bibble-babble, gabble, gibble-gabble, blabber, gibber, jabber, patter, prate, prattle, rattle, bavardage, guff, gash, clack, gas, hot air, bull, blah, blah-blah, gammon, claptrap, skible-scamble, slipslap, wish-wash, drivel, dribble, drool, slaver, gibberish, jargon, mumbo-jumbo, double talk, gobbledegook and bafflegab.

If you turn away from this in disappointment, still possessed of an exquisite desire for precise definition, and think that what you are listening to is less rotund and more delicately phrased, try TALK NONSENSE, category 545.8, page 356:

TALK NONSENSE: twaddle, twattle, piffle, fudge, blather, blabber, babble, bibble-babble, gabble, gibble-gabble, jabber, gibber, patter, prate, prattle, fiddle-faddle, rattle, clack, gas, bull, throw the bull, feed the bull, drivel, drool, slaver and run off at the mouth.

After committing these to memory, you may proceed to Unintelligibility, page 357, which is different.

Where There's Life

By Andre Hope

At this point, if I had a fan I'd fare it in honor of the announcement of the winner in the GREAT MEAT LOAF CONTEST.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Andre, excuse me for cutting in. But I thought your devoted and hungry readers should know that you received over 45 entries in your GML contest, proving that there are apparently as many ways to make meat loaf as there are to cure colds.

Unfortunately, the only instruments I can play are the castanets, the conga drum and the toy trombone. I hope a simple clack, bong and poot will be sufficient. It was tough (in a tender sort of way) for our judges to make up their greedy little minds. Equally rough for me, because we had a tie and one of the winners happens to be a friend of mine. I don't want to be accused of prejudice. Therefore, dinner for two at Leavell's in the Carmel Valley goes to new friend, Eva L. Dunbar of Carmel, and dinner at Hope's Hospitality Hut goes to Louise Parkhurst (and family) of Carmel. Mrs. Dunbar's recipe is for De Luxious Chestnut Meat Loaf.

½ pound ground veal
¼ pound salt pork
1 lg. onion, chopped
1 green pepper, chopped
½ cup CHESTNUTS, chopped
¼ cup celery, chopped (what else?)
2 beaten eggs
2 cups corn or wheat flakes
1 can mushroom soup
2-3 sprigs parsley
1 tbs. Worcester sauce
1¼ tsp. salt, ¼ tsp. pepper
¼ tsp. mustard (clove of garlic, optional)

Blend ingredients thoroughly with enough milk to make a firm loaf. Pack in greased pan. Pour a cup of canned tomatoes (slightly spiced preferred) over loaf, and lace strips of bacon over top. Bake one hour at 350 degrees. Serves six to eight.

(I would suggest using canned chestnuts. Or, more economically, water chestnuts can be used, and are delicious.)

Have fun with Kay and Verne at Leavell's. We always do! Mrs. D. Next week, Mrs. Parkhurst's recipe . . .

Right now, Christmas shopping (please don't call it Xmas!). Browsing through Harrison's Oriental shop on Lincoln, south of Ocean; buying a parasol to transform into a table decoration for the A. F. A. holiday decoration show at the Mission Ranch, this Friday and Saturday.

I fell in love with the following goodies: In the decoration line, the lovely white doves, which can also be sprayed and sparkled; heavenly angels from Tai-Wan; Siamese mobiles, known as quivering modules, in fantastic colors.

Color and more color, lacquer tray sets with dishes and serving bowls, most fabulously hued. I'd say these were guaranteed to gay up dinner for one and as for dinner with two — may I use the word "sexy," boss?

Unusual gifts for children who don't care for tin and plastic things that either lose their keys or go queerp, clonck, and give up; Japanese dolls with complete changes of clothes and wigs, accompanied by instructions on hair-dos; paper dolls, similarly equipped, and beautiful Burmese puppets. They also have the pretty-practical Mama-San aprons in four different colors.

Apology! Last week, in writing of Dave McElhatton and Friendly Clyde, I reversed the true status of their golfing ability. Also, Friendly's real life name is Welch — not Welsh . . .

I know exactly what I'm going to do about my Christmas shopping; I'm going to sit down and cry a little.

INSIDE PEOPLE . . . .

BY LARRY ROSE

Ocean Avenue is a boulevard of chic, sophisticated, quaint, charming and altogether fashionable shops.

Great care, varying flights of imagination, some emotion, and a pride of taste go into the window decorations.

Clothes, bread, vegetables, gadgets, gifts, perfumes, real estate, money at 4¾%, plastic Christmas trees, scotch, model cars and salami are artfully, appealingly, imaginatively and hopefully displayed.

The soft, the hard, the coy, the sweet, the tender and the tasty sell, vibrate and flutter up and down the avenue, rising to something of a passion at Christmas, but always editorializing the season.

But vernal or autumnal, Mother's Day or New Year's, one display never changes. And the crowds which pause, stare, gesture excitedly to one another and press against the window for a closer look confirm a fact which is as delightful to Jim Burkholder at the Village Cleaners as it may be disconcerting to the dedicated and conscientious windowdressers on the rest of the avenue.

People do not window shop for a dry cleaning establishment, any more than they window shop for a plumber, undertaker or attorney. And so, the purpose of Jim's display, which commenced to accumulate three years ago, is not to attract business. As a matter of fact, it hasn't got any purpose at all. Fascinating. And contrary to the principles of space utilization. But not uninteresting.

The display was not intentionally such in the beginning — even though one might say that for a dry cleaner to put an iron in the window is not really an excess of innocence. But Jim, motives notwithstanding, found himself in possession of an old alcohol-fired iron about three years ago, which Mrs. Burkholder had bought at a church rummage sale for $2.00. He put it in his empty window, and it was the start of a valuable collection and an invaluable attraction.

Shortly thereafter, Lorenz Asmussen, passing by, saw the iron and offered Jim an old one he had. Jim bought it, added it to the window, and an embryonic collection had uncoiled its irresistible momentum.

Mrs. Burkholder, now fired with enthusiasm, picked up an old flat iron at an antique show at the fairgrounds, and a salesman, spotting the three in the window, mentioned a venerable tailor in Bakersfield who had an 18-pound tailor's iron which he had chrome-plated, because it was of great sentimental value, and which he might be willing to part with. Jim never met the man, doesn't know his name. But the brilliant and ponderous instrument showed up shortly thereafter, and resides in the window today.

JIM BURKHOLDER AND HIS MANY IRONS IN THE FIRE.

Jim speaks with a sort of pleased bewilderment over the way in which the collection has accumulated. "People come in and insist on giving me irons. They talk about the old electric iron I have, as if it were something that Franklin invented. It's really not that old, you know. And steam irons! They only came into being a few years ago. But I saw a woman point to a charcoal burner and say, 'that's just like the old steam iron that granny used on the farm.'"

What Jim was indicating, besides the confusion in the contemporary mind over how long ago things like the wheel or electric irons were invented, was the stubborn insistence of people on a premise that irons are heated by electricity or by resting on the stove lid. An examination of the display refutes this and supplants it with a creditable essay on human ingenuity.

Various irons provide for heating by charcoal, alcohol, gasoline, steam, electricity and contact. They are made of brass, iron, steel, and are frequently attractive—a surprising attribute for such a homely article. For instance, there is a Danish iron, cast in brass, which was heated with charcoal, and it bears certain artistic marks of shape, proportion and ornamentation that are quite becoming. A present-day advertising man would have insisted on it being marketted with a slogan: "Ironing can be Fun! Ironing can be ennobling! Use a stylish Glivtisch!

And then, there is the Lady's Friend, manufactured by H. P. Carver, Racine, Wisc. Or a brass English small iron, for finishing. Or the Geneva fluter, heated on the transfer principle, manufactured in 1866 by C. W. Whitfield, Syracuse, N. Y.

Or the Coleman iron, which Jim literally took away from a kid in Mendocino county, who was making roads with it. This, no doubt, set back the state highway construction program for a number of years.

But it added to his collection.

And people continue to add to his collection. Or try to buy it away from him. They come in and say, "Oh, I've got an old iron at home that you should just have." And, as it turns out, sooner or later, he does.

Quite recently, Jim acquired several items from an antique dealer, who had sold to Kuppenheimer, clothes manufacturers, a select collection of irons. The suit people had paid $20,000 for the collection, which was to be used in advertising displays celebrating their 300 years of tailoring men's clothes.

And a man in town returned from Texas with an old charcoal burner which had a fluting device on the side. It rests in the window today, alongside perhaps Jim's most cherished item. This is a sad iron—Jim isn't sad to think about it, just curious as to why it is so named. It consists of a handle and many irons, complete with a lovely trivett which is fretted out in the design of a heart and anchor. It is dated, 1730. When people come inside to examine the collection more closely, it is not unusual for some enthusiastic young lady, pushing thirty, to pick up the sad iron and emote. "Oh, look, dear; it's just like the one mother used to use!"

And so did Martha Washington.

SYMPHONY

Abel & Brahms

David Abel played the Brahms Violin Concerto in Sunset Auditorium last Tuesday, and why everyone didn't stand up and cheer when he had finished is beyond me. When he returned to the stage there was a lot of foot stamping. Long applause recalled him again and again, but no one ever got up off his seat and paid Abel the tribute his great performance demanded.

Brahms' single concerto for violin is a musical landmark, familiar the world over, available on numerous recordings, and performed in concert halls every season. Jascha Heifitz, for one, plays it with incredible finesse, but with hardly the fire and passion that David Abel gave to it here on Tuesday. The Monterey County Symphony under its resident conductor, John Gosling, complemented the young violinist admirably.

A composition which won the Monterey County Symphony's Composer Competition Award opened the evening program. It was Concert Overture, Opus 1, by Edward Applebaum. In his first opus Applebaum reflects the tradition of much American music in the last quarter century. It is full of moments which are striking in sonority and rhythmic intensity. At other points it was touch and go, leaving the listener wondering if what he had just heard was too hard for the orchestra, or possibly, if the score might not need some revising. It is a piece one would like to hear again, however.

Haydn's Symphony No. 104 in D Major completed the program. Gosling and the orchestra rendered this 'classical monument" with devotion. The performance reached levels of inspiration, which the overall competency marked another step in the ascendance of the Monterey County Symphony.

JAZZ

Trumpets blared forth in the college music hall last Sunday evening as MPC's new jazz band made its Peninsula debut. Folding chairs had to be brought out to accommodate the over flowing crowd, but no one seemed to mind as the student band jumped and rocked the whole night through.

The concert debut also marked the formal introduction of its leader to this community. Jerry Coker, who joined the college's music faculty this fall, is a composer, writer and performer of prominence in American jazz. That he is a glowing musical mentor of young men was evidenced Sunday by the spirited and devoted playing of the new band.

The program included big band jazz numbers by such well known arrangers as Quincy Jones, George Russell, Duke Jordan, and Coker himself. In addition, there were pieces composed and arranged by students. Outstanding among these was Yama by Jack Stock, a trombonist in the band and its most swinging soloist. Other fine solos were performed by Nick Williams, Tony Campise, and Norm Disher, all of the sax section.

The 15-piece band retired briefly following an intermission, and Patricia Coker, Jerry's wife, sang a set of three. She was backed by a rhythm section composed of Jim Zimmerman, drums, Nick Williams, bass, and Mr. Coker at the piano. Mrs. Coker proved to have a clean sweet voice in the straighter renditions, but when she turned to a style known in jazz as "scat" singing there were signs of not having been at it much lately.

The band returned to play a piece by Coker called Wail for Patrick, which could also be called Doxie Rides Again. Coker, a tenor sax player of top calibre, has accomplished wonders in the time he has been with the college. The new jazz band at MPC compares well with the best in these parts heard in past Monterey Jazz Festivals.

Stock Market Analysis

By John D. Gates

WITHDRAWAL PLANS

In last week's Pine Cone, it was pointed out that the investors in mutual funds enjoy a number of conveniences that are not available to holders of individual stocks. They have the convenience of automatic reinvestment of dividends, with the custodian bank holding the certificates as part of the regular services.

Another service that most funds offer is the systematic withdrawal plan. Under this arrangement, an investor is sent a check for a regular fixed amount each month. He is not subject to the sporadic payment of dividend checks at various times, and in varying amounts, as is usually the case with one owning a portfolio of individual stocks. This not only simplifies one's financial planning; it also reduces one's bookkeeping.

In a declining market, this procedure may have the effect of depleting the initial investment. However, many investors are not averse to using some of their principal over a period of time for their own purposes. In a rising market, the experience may be just the reverse, and the investment may increase so that it more than offsets the withdrawals. Of course, the fund is constantly receiving dividends and interest on the investments that it holds, and these tend to replenish the fund.

Most of the funds set a limit on the minimum amount that they will service under this plan. The general rule is that an investor must have a minimum investment of $10,000, in order to start the plan. Then, they permit a maximum monthly withdrawal at the rate of six per cent, per annum. This is $600 per year, or $50.00 per month, on $10,000.

If a lower initial investment and a higher withdrawal rate are desired, the funds usually want a specific commitment from the investor that he understands the hazard of depleting his investment by withdrawing excessive amounts.

When an investor holds his withdrawals to an amount that the fund might reasonably expect to pay in dividends during the year, he should be able to enjoy the convenience of this plan without any danger of diminishing the number of shares he holds in the fund. He is at liberty to terminate the plan at any time, or to make partial liquidations of his shares should he require lump sum amounts occasionally.

Donald Hale

With the death of Donald Hale at his Carmel Valley home on 29 November, Carmel has lost one of its old time well known and well liked citizens. Mr. Hale was born in Oakland on 2 June, 1895. He came, with his mother, the late Mrs. Frederick Bechdolt, to make his home in Carmel in 1906. He attended the Carmel and Monterey schools and later Tamalpias Military Academy. At the outbreak of World War I, he enlisted in the Army and served creditably until after the Armistice. Following his release from service, he was married to Alice Hilby, a member of an old Monterey family.

For many years he was engaged in the building business in Carmel, and also operated his own real estate and insurance business.

He was one of the original members of the Abalone League and was associated with many civic enterprises. He was also one of the early members of American Legion Post No. 41.

He left Carmel in 1937 and for several years was engaged in dairying near Chico. Returning to this vicinity about 1948, he has since been engaged in ranching and real estate in the Carmel Valley. He leaves, besides his wife, two daughters, Mrs. Bruce Gottfriedson of Santa Maria, Mrs. John Sand of Bethesda, Maryland, his sister, Mrs. L. E. Gottfried of Carmel, and eight grandchildren.

Mistletoe Magic On Saturday

Mother Goose chapter of Children's Home Society will present a Mistletoe Magic Christmas house tour on Saturday. This fall fund-raising project will include four homes on show, and a special attraction for children called Fantasyland.

The children will follow a path to find many surprises ahead—a sleigh ride or perhaps a ride on a candy cane swing. Also on hand will be Santa's auxiliary mailbox for children to drop their letters into.

Each home on the tour will have a special theme, suggested by the Christmas season. Open from 1-5 p.m., 7-9 p.m. will be the homes of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Saunders, 700 Colton St., Monterey — its theme, Gift of the Magi; Captain and Mrs. William Arnold, 95 Alta Mesa Circle, Monterey—Glitter & Glamour; Dr. and Mrs. Don Dubrasich, 877 El Dorado, Monterey—Space Age; and Dr. and Mrs. David Thorngate, 540 El Dorado, Monterey — Sugar and Spice.

A bazaar and bake sale will be held at the Dubrasich home, and holiday punch will be served at the Thorngates'.

Active and associate members are working together to make this a successful project. In 1961, 1081 children were placed in permanent adoptive homes by the Children's Home Society.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERMON

"God the Only Cause and Creator" will be the subject of the Lesson-Sermon at Christian Science church services Sunday.

Scriptural readings will include these verses from Romans: "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out! . . . For of him, and through him, and to him, are all things: to whom be glory for ever."

This correlative citation will be among those read from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy (p. 275): "All substance, intelligence, wisdom, being, immortality, cause, and effect belong to God. These are his attributes, the eternal manifestations of the infinite divine Principle, Love."

Sports . . .

Basketball

Last Saturday, for the first time in many years, the Carmel Padres beat the Watsonville Wildcats in a basketball game. After losing the JV game and the lightweight game, the Varsity came from behind in the last two minutes to stage an upset win 58-57. Outstanding teamwork, hustle, and seven players making the scoring column contributed to the win. The Wildcats hit 83% from the free throw lane, but had only six chances as the Padres committed one foul in the first half and three in the second for a total of four fouls in the complete game.

Jack DeWitt continually drove for the two-pointers, while the "Big Jims" (Kelley and Belvail) swept the boards. The floor play and timely scoring of Jose Fernandez, Richard Wise, Rusty McCarthy, Dave Maher and Inborg Halle added to the victory.

The lightweights lacked the speed and experience necessary to cope with the Wildkittens. After making a gallant effort in the second quarter, they fell behind in the third never to catch up. DiLorenzo led the scoring with 11 points with Ed Brown adding eight.

The Junior Varsity, showing inexperience at every position, was defeated 29-21 by Watsonville. In their first game of the season they showed great defensive play by holding Watsonville scoreless in the third quarter, but could not score enough to make up the deficit. Jay Miller and Al Nishimura led the scoring with 9 and 7 respectively, while Bob Moffatt's floor play was outstanding.

In the first game of the season, both the Varsity and the Lightweights lost to Sequoia High on Friday night. The Varsity made a valiant bid in the first half, which ended with the score at 23-20. In the third quarter the taller Cherokees, aided by the many mistakes of the Padres, pulled away, and the game ended 57-45.

In the Lightweight game the Padrebabes were up against a taller, more experienced team. Although DiLorenzo scored 28 points, Carmel was unable to match the floor play and scoring of Sequoia. The final score was 58-34.

This is tournament week for both the Varsity and Lightweights.

Carmel Varsity, the defending champions of the Gustine Tournament, will play LeGrande at 6:00 p.m. on Thursday, and if they win will play at 9:00 p.m. on Friday.

The Lightweights go to Salinas to battle the host team, Salinas, on Thursday. Both teams will play three games during the Tournament, one game each on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

No Track?

Track season, officially underway on 1 March, but for most practical purposes in a sort of conditioning status commencing in midwinter, may never get off the blocks at Carmel High this season, unless a track coach can be found.

This most popular of the non-contact sports attracts a large number of students, mostly because of the diversity of events and the unusual potential for individual improvement, which shows in track and field events far more clearly than in most others.

But coaching at Carmel is not a teaching classification. Coaching of all sports is done by teachers who, instead of instructing five periods, teach only four and have one hour for coaching. They average, however, at least two hours per day in coaching, as much as five or six hours for game time.

Picking up such duty has become unattractive, particularly when Carmel teachers see Monterey and Pacific Grove paying from $300 to $500 bonus to their teachers who also coach a sport.

Compensating time off, which the Board dropped two years ago, might still be attractive. But a special committee of teachers and administrators find themselves at odds with the teachers' association on this question, and nothing is presently before the Board—except the astounding prospect of Carmel being unable to field a team in a major sport.

This will, undoubtably remain the case in March, unless teachers and the Board give principal Warren Edwards some alluring bait to dangle in his so far fruitless search for a track mentor.

Dear Sir:

A belated, but most grateful, note to thank you in part for voluntarily assisting in our campaign for Congress.

We won a spectacular victory. Some political "experts" consider ours the most resounding congressional win in the nation. Your help was most important.

Warm personal regards.

Yours very truly,
Burt L. Talcott
